PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

Trained as an architect with a keen interest in various scales of design, my academic and professional trajectories lie in the intersection of spatial design and participatory planning, driven by research and the urge to shape day-to-day life. I am particularly interested in understanding cities through the lens of social equity and climate resilience. Having worked on a broad spectrum of urban projects over the last three years, ranging from piloting sustainable mobility at a neighborhood scale in India to strategic planning for combating social vulnerability against Californian wildfires, I am eager to dive into the public realm of design thinking.
